Fellowships go to Social work students

The Council on Social Work Education's Minority Fellowship Program recently awarded Cal State Fullerton graduate social work students Aja Daniels and Jorcyein Ani with $6,500 fellowships.

Daniels and Ani were two of 40 scholars chosen from across the United States.

The students were lauded for their commitment to aid and provide mental health services to at-risk youth and young adults in underserved communities.

The fellowship is funded through the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, a part of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Moot Court teams win big on national stage

CSUF Moot Court teams won several awards at the American Collegiate Moot Court Association's National Championship Tournament in Long Beach last month.

Moot Court is a court simulation.

CSUF teams placed in the top 10 in the written competition. More than 250 teams participated in the competition.

"Our teams are extraordinary, and the written brief is proof that CSUF's Moot Court team – consisting of nearly all first-generation college students – can compete with the elite and private universities in the nation," said Pamela Fiber-Ostrow, associate professor of political science and CSUF Moot Court coach.

Faculty works published

CSUF faculty members' recently published works include:

- "Psychosocial Studies of the Individual's Changing Perspective in Alzheimer's Disease," co-edited by Myron Orleans, professor emeritus of sociology;
- "Egypt's Lost Spring: Causes and Consequences," by Sherif Khalifa, associate professor of economics;
